small, report an unusually busy season and at some yards all the work is in hand that can be attended to. This state of things has not obtained before for several years and the promise of a brilliant season consequently is very bright. Cruisers, day boats, runabouts and speed boats are being built. Some of these will be raced and those who have the interests of speed boat racing at heart think that some of the troubles which have marred the sport in the past will be smoothed away and that there will be motor boat racing on all pieces

On no part of the coast has motor leat racing proved more popular than along the southern New Jersey coast and on the the southern New Jersey coast and on the Delaware River. There motor boat racing seems to have driven the sailing craft away and there are more motor boat clubs congregated on those waterways than in any other part of the country of the same size. There are two associations which govern the sport, the Delaware River Yacht Racing Association and the South Yacht Racing Association and the South Jersey Yacht Racing Association. This boom in the sport was largely due to the interest taken in it by the Yachtsmen's Club of Philadelphia. The club's race t Havana and over other long distance courses, as well as races for shorter distances, showed that the owner of a motor boat could enjoy cruising and at the same time indulge in a race now and then. Consequently owners of small boats ecame very active.

The clubhouses built five years ago

have proved too small and many are be ing enlarged. The Ocean City Yacht Club has additions which when completed will make that house one of the best equipped on the New Jersey coast. It will cost

Atlantic City is hustling to get new quarters that will keep that club up with the others. The Lavalete Club is to build a boathouse at the end of its wharf. The Island Heights Yacht Club will make alterations to give more room to members. The new motor boat club vessel. Several other craft are new to members. The new motor beat club at Island Heights is flourishing and is to make improvements in its house. The dockage and the house will be redecorated and enlarged, and the Sea Isle City Club will make changes in its house and again add to its property.
